

Szabolcs KÉRI

Szabolcs is a professor of physiology and psychiatry at the Universities of Szeged and Budapest as well as the scientific director of the Hungarian National Institute of Psychiatry. He is also a regular visiting professor at Rutgers University, New Jersey, USA. With his ground-breaking discoveries on the relationship between schizophrenia and creativity he prompted into the headlines three years ago. His research focuses on the biological foundations of psychiatric diseases and human behaviour and he is one of the most advanced experts in the world in the field of biological psychiatry.

PSYCHOLOGICAL SCIENCE

Research Report

Genes for Psychosis and Creativity

A Promoter Polymorphism of the Neuregulin 1 Gene Is Related to Creativity in People With High Intellectual Achievement

Szabolcs Kéri
Semmelweis University